

6516206561.txt

Satellite Radio is an excellent example of meeting consumer's demand for services they want. We pay for satellite radio and get channels focused on our music and content interests without annoying commercials. Limiting content, particularly local, publicly available content related to traffic and weather would be a ridiculous and anti-consumer action on the part of the FCC. Do not place such limitations on the services we pay for.
Colleen Tynan